HONGRONG, DECEMBER 12TH, 1877.

Our correspondent "Apo's Ghost" reminds us that we made no mention of the persecution suffered by Chun Akai, the compradore of the Hongkong Club, in our remarks on the case of the notorious LEE LUM KWAI, and his signature calls to our remembrance the Chinese Government to prevent the export of the whole. scale formed on the plates to exceriate, and everytime this took place the plate was left thinner: chemical action then set in again and formed a new deposit of scale, which in time was also excoristed or broken off from the stay... The tension on the flat end of the boiler is greater than on the cylindrical part. When the boiler is under steam the amount of expansion varies. There is a constant strain and twisting of the gusset stays when there is steam in the boiler, and this fret leaves a fresh surface of the iron to be acted upon The wear and tear in consequence of the chemical and mechanical action was more severe on the gusset stays than on any other part of the boiler. both sides being exposed to chemical action. A rolled plate is more dense and closer in the fibre on the outside than in the centre and thereby resists exydisation more at the beginning of its use : after this outer surface has been worn away ! the surface left, being more open in fibre, corthat subject, sensibly remarks that "every rodes more rapidly. As the gusset stays became tion arising from mechanical action would go on at a greatly increased ratio, so that during the last month previous to being severed the plates would fact that the first and eighth stays had entirely disappeared, I judge that they had suffered in a greater degree from the chemical and mechanical action than the other six. The noper part of the portions of the stays remaining, attached to the shell of the boller are almost of their original thickness. There was less tortion on that part, and it was further from the water level.

The point of severance in all cases was within one. or two inches of the angle iron on the end plata. blown out. I account for this by the mechanical motion I have mentioned. Taking into account the rapidly increasing ratio in which the deterioration went on, I think it possible that four or five months ago the stays were not severed. One of them had been connected at the time of the explosion. I think it possible that an engineer might have gone into the boiler four or five months before the explosion, and making a casual inspection without having his attention The German gunbout Neutilus. Captain Valois, specially drawn to the defect in the stays, might have supposed that they were in a fairly strong condition; indeed he could not have seen the defect without putting his head in between them, and feeling the thickness of the plates with his hand. An engineer having no special reason for supposing decay to be present; and observing only the upper part of the plates, might have thought that all were sound. An engineer who had been accustomed to round stave in that part of the boiler would be more likely to be deceived than another man who had been. accustomed to flat stays, and therefore imagine By the Messageries Maritimes Company's them sound. Some engineers are theoretical as has had a scientific education he would b less able to understand the nature of metals. their expansion, strength, and the effects of corresion on them. On some abstract questions there are differences of opinion among theoreticals men who have had practical experience. I do not think what I have stated about machanical action is very generally known amongst engineers. As a rule engineers on merchant steamers are more practical than scientific. I would not class a chief engineer ignorant of this law of mechanical action as incompetent to act as chief engineer in consequence of At the Marine Court, yesterday, before Captain; that ignorance. A mere thinness in a plate Phomsett, R.N., James Froeman, seeman on the would not of itself be dangerous if the plate o the Chinese Government for it.

very thin. The shells of both boilers of the Yesso are in good condition, and the boilers, with the The Foochow Herald commercial report, dated exception of these gusset stays, were very excelsize instead of flat guaset stays, I do not think stays, whether round or flat, are not usually put into boilers of this size; they are generally put only into small boilers where longitudinal stays would interfere with the room necessary to clean the boiler. If all the stays had been intact and the end plate not impaired the safety valve might have been loaded to 30lbs. with safety. A portion of the end plate had been worn a little thin, but if the stays had been intact there would have been nodanger called upon the tradesmen whom he tried to of explosion from that. There is a general rule regulating the duties of engineers on board merchant steamers in port. The third engineer looks after the boilers, the second engineer looks after the engines, the first engineer supervises make periodical inspections himself. Under ordinary circumstances the chief engineer would inspect his boilers about once in six months. I cannot say whether it would or would not be likely that the chief engineer having looked at these stays six months ago The usual fortnightly entertainment at the would have found them intact. I have known ing the greatest care and skill on the part of the engineers such accidents have happened . Re-examined by Mr. Sharp-I do consider that flat stays were improper to be put in this boiler, on account of the rapid deterioration to which they are subject, owing to the larger extent of surface they expose. I think any competent engineer ought to know that. An engineer ought to be more careful of them supposing that he knew of their inherent defect. There is no actual rule as to how often the chief engineer shall make an examination of the boiler, but nocording to custom under ordinary circumstances he would inspect them once in six months. skilful chief engineer would make an examination whenever he thought it was necessary. If the survey of the starboard beiler of the Yesso as he boilers were in a weak state and corresion going on he cusht to make an inspection more frequently than once in six months if he was aware of the defects. Mr. Sharp-Are you of opinion that an ordinary careful engineer making a careful examination could fail to become aware of the defects von have described?

SUMMARY JURISDICTION.

December 11th

Before Mr. Justice Snowden.

WAN HO SANG V. WADE, $31.64.—This was claim brought by the steward of the Chinese revenue cruiser. Shen Chi against the commander Captain Wade. Mr. Donnys said he had been requested to at tend by the defendant, not to appear to the action, but simply to explain why the defendant was not present; he did not appear because the jurisdiction of the court was questioned. IThe case was one between the steward and commander of a Chinese revenue cruiser, and stood on precisely the same fosting as a case which Peng-chou-hai. The claim was one for wages arned on board the vessel. Supposing this money to be due in any way it was due from the Chinese Government to the plaintiff as steward of the revenue erviser, and, that being so, he subthe merits. but it would not

His Lordship said it was decided some time ago that these ships were conceded the status of ien of war. He remembered the case of the Peng-chou hai well, and it was then held the court had no jurisdiction to enter into questions beween the captain and men. The only question vas. ought there not to be an affidavit?

Mr. Dennys said the defendant was very unwell: he was ashore on account of his health and unable to leave the house: but he would be very glad to get an affidavit from him if the court thought it necessary. The Shen Chi was on precisely the same footing as the Peng-chouit was not in the employ of the Viceroy, out of the Hoppo. Plaintiff was then called up and admitted that he plaintiff was the captain of the revenue ruser and that the claim was for wages carned His Lordship said an affidavit would not required now, and explained to the plaintiff that the court did not take cognisance of disputes beween the captain of a revenue cruiser and his as the Town book-(moduced in Court), and the servants; that the debt if due at all was due ither from the Chinese Government or the cap-

Plaintiff said he was shipped in Hongkong, and herefore summoned defendant in Hongkong. His Lordship said that did not matter. Mr. Dennys asked for costs.

His Lordship said that as there was no ap pearance to the suit no costs could be given. Summons dismissed. CHUN ASHING V. AITKEN, $12.-This was claim by chair coolies for a month's wages. Defendant did not deny that the wages had een earned, but said the plaintiffs left on the lst of the month without giving notice. When they came for their money he told them he would 15th. After this he received a summons.—

The postnan said he wanted $1.08 notice, and he would therefore allow them no postage. He looked at the letters and saw two costs. Judgment for plaintiff's without costs. THOMPSON V. THE MESSAGERIES MARITIMES

The plaintiff is the master and part owner of the British barque Mangerton, and socks to re over compensation for the loss of employment of his shin from October 5th to the 20th during epairs rendered necessary by injuries she received defendants have admitted their liability and have man come and handel two letters to the last paid for the costs of repairs. The only question witness, who then handed them to him. He between the parties is, how much they should pay looked at them and say they were both addressed for consequential damages for the loss of the use in English and Guzenti to Cowasjee Rustomjee of the ship. This is a legitimate ground of at Canton. He noticed two clean unchliterated lamages, provided the plaintiff can prove the actual postage stamps on such letter, but he did not loss. The Mangerton arrived with a cargo of coals notice the value of the stamps because it was from Newcastle, N.S. W., on September 19th; on in English, which be could not read. The man the following morning the collision took place, said something to himabout payment of postage, and the plaintiff at once wrote to the defendant's and in compliance with what he said he gave manager here, M. du Pouey, informing him of $1.08. He did not know how much postage he the accident, adding "For all damage I must paid for each letter. The man went away hold your Company responsible, and must ask Witness put the two letters litte a box, which that you will provide me with a guarantee that box he was accustomed to send to Canton by the all expenses necessary to put my barque again river atenmers. He sent the box with the two into thorough order shall be borne by you, and letters in it as usual. Since then he had no that all loss of time caused by the accident shall be made good to me." That is distinct notice that the plaintiff would require compensation for loss of time. The manager proposes a survey, mail arrived, on the 28th ultimo, he received and declines to pay damage until he has been able to communicate with the Captain of the Volga. On the 28th September he writes that the captain will send a report by the English mail, and declines, for the present, responsibility. Surveys were held by Captain Burnie on the 21st on the part of the plaintiff, and by Captain McMurdo for the Company. Tenders were invited, and repairs were begun October 1st and at the Post Office, and if his Worship would were finished on the 20th by the Hongkong and Whampea Dock Company. It is proved by Mr. Wieler, who was plaintiff's agent, that soon after the Mangerton arrived, applications were made to charter her at 23 to 24 cents per picul. Fung Fa, who is a shipbroker, states that he made the offer, but did not come to terms because the ship was not rendy. Yone Mun Choi also applied to Mr. Wieler to charter a ship at the end of September and offered to pay 23 to 24 cents per picul. I think there is ample evidence that had the Mangerton been fit to go to sea

she would have been chartered at this rate The defence raised by Mr. Brereton is, as far as understand it, that had notice been given to M. du Pouey, the repairs might have been hurried on and the ship made ready by the 12th I do not think that there was any obligation on the plaintiff to give notice of these offers. Ithough it would have been better to do so. His letter of the 21st informed M. du Pouev generally that he should charge for loss of employment; and it is one of the natural results of damage by collision known to all nautical men and was to be expected. The more important question seems to me to be, was there any unnecessary delay? caused by the collision were paid for by the into the water, and when he rose no opinion to the contrary. The claim seems
